THE ROPEWALK CHURCH

THREE HUNDRED BODIES BURIED IN THE CELLAR.

Ice Formerly Stored There, and Late Beer, Wines and Liquors Belonging to a Brevier Who Had Leased It.

From the New York Sun. "Speaking of funny nicknames for churches," said the Kev. Dr. Hodder, pastor of the Sixteenth Eaptist church, in West Sixteenth street, "that reminds me of the one borne by the church of which I happen to be pastor. To older members of the society it is known as the 'Ropewalk.' the society it is known as the Ropewalk. In the early days, I am told, it was universally called by that name. When the church was organized seventy years ago, its trustees had very modest ideas as to the size of an auditorium needed for a growing congregation. As it was to be located in what was then the suburbs of the town, they naturally concluded that an editice of small dimensions would answer every purpose, so a lot 20xho feet was purchased, where the first building of the society was srected.

where the first building of the society was erected.

"Nuch to the surprise of the trustees, in about five years they found their quarters altogether too narrow. In the meantime the tots on each side of the church had been sold. This made it impossible to broaden the building, so it was extended to the full length of the lot, 100 feet.

"Imagine an auditorium, if you can, 100 feet long and only 20 feet wide, with one narrow aisie running through the center. In entering and leaving the church indian file had to be observed. One day a wag who stood at the rear of the church watching the people thread their way down the long, narrow aisie to their seats remarked those people look just as though they were walking a rope. That is the origin of the name.

walking a rope. That is the origin to the arms.

"The congregation soon outgrew its long quarters and sought a larger place to spread itself. So a roomy site in Sixteenth street was selected. The sixteenth Baptist church erected in the city, organized by sixteen members, is in Sixteenth steet, in the Sixteenth ward.

church erected in the city, organized by sixteen members, is in Sixteenth steet, in the Sixteenth ward.

"Well, work was soon begun on the foundation for the new church. Instead of striking solid rock, as was expected, a fine bed of sand was opened up. At first this was looked upon as a misfortune, but a commercially minded brother demonstrated the contrary by finding a ready market for its sale, whereby the building fund was considerably increased.

"This time the trustees builded more wisely, and a very large church for that early day was erected. It had a seating capacity of 1,500, and stands to-day with but slight alterations, as it was built over sixty years ago. Our society is the only one of the Baptist denomination in the city now worshiping in its original edifice.

"When the structure was completed the trustees discovered that they had a big cave underneath the church. As only a small part of it could possibly be utilized for church purposes, they induced an ice dealer to lease it as a storage house for his next winter's crop of ice. Although the old ropewalk church had been deserted, yet the name followed the society to Sixteenth street. Added to this unique characteristic, the society was now the only one in the city worshiping over an ice bed. It did not appear to congeal their religious fervor and enthusiasm, for one of the largest revivals in its history occurred in this glacial period.

"Unfortunately for the dealer, his crop of

"Unfortunately for the dealer, his crop of ice melted and he failed in business. The trustees not only lost a tenant and the rent, but were put to considerable expense clearing away the debris left behind by the

"The trustees believed thoroughly in the "The trustees believed thoroughly in the motto. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again, so they persisted in their effort to secure a tenant until successful. The new one happened to be a brewer. He desired to use it as a storehouse for his goods. They saw no good reason why the church should not profit in this indirect way from the sale of spirituous liquors. Some one else would get his money if they did not, and it might better go into the treasury of a good cause than a bad one, they reasoned and so the lease was given to the brewer. Their consciences troubled them somewhat, but not enough to cause loss of sleep. The cellar was soon stored to the somewhat, but not enough to cause loss of sleep. The cellar was soon stored to the brim with bear, ale and liquors. The affairs of the church continued to run smoothly and large accessions of converts were made that year. Whether this spiritual prosperity was augmented by the spiritual prosperity was augmented by the spiritis stored below I do not know, but sure it is that the critical spirits of the town soon began to make matters warm for the trustees of the church, while the temperance people were horrified at the inconsistency. Regardlees of this criticism, the trustees thought they knew a good thing when they saw it, and so kept their tenant—the moral side of the question was too insignificant to justify serious consideration. Anathemas against the liquor traffic were occasionally hurled from the pulpit, and the greaf sin of intemperance was laid bare before the complicent audience that plously sat over thousands of gallons of beer.

stroying their homes. But there did not appear to be any power in these scares to aronse them.

"However, the cruel and wicked world outside of the pale of the church, who were supposed to be utterly devoid of spiritual discernment, by accident discovered the inconsistency of such a course, Under the direction of a local leader a joke was planned and perpetrated one Saturday night which was more cruitful of results than the originators dreamed it would be. The next morning the members of the church were scandalized by reading the following over the church door:

There's a spirit above and a spirit below.

"This was too much for the people to endure and forthwith they forced the trustees to cancel the lease of the brewer and rid the church of its unholy alliance.

"Again the trustees were embarrassed by the same old question, 'How shall we utilize this space?' Several meetings were held to discuss the all-important question, but without result. At the fourth meeting one of them said in a despairing tone:

"Well this is a grave subject.' Quick as flash another jumped to his feet and exa flash another jumped to his feet and exclaimed:

"I have it! Let's partition the space off into vaults and bury our dead there at $25 per head."

"The suggestion soon worked its way to a tangible plan which was immediately executed, and inside of eix months the vaults were ready to receive the dead. For years the trustees did a graveyard businsss at 300 per cent profit, and over 300 bodies are now in the cellar."

A Historical Whopper.

From the Corchill Magazine.

Perhaps the most humorous story in connection with the 1st of June, Lord Howe's victory, is the amazing fable of the Venguer, which is due to the patriotic imagination, unrestrained by any regard for prosale accuracy, of Barrere. Barrere reported to the convention that the Venguer went down with all her colors flying, scorning to surrender; "Vive la republique, and a universal volley from the upper deck being the last sound she made." "Glorieuse affaire du Venguer" became for the French a national myth. It has inspired innumerable French songs. A wooden model of the Venguer was solemnly consecrated and placed in the Pantheon, Carlyle embodied the story in his "French Revolution." "Lo!" he wrote, "all flags, streamers, jacks, every rag of tricolor that will yet run on rope files rustling aloft. The whole crew crowds to the upper deck, and with universal soul-maddening yell shouts. Vive la Republique sinking, sinking."

Carlyle fater on discovered how wild a flight of fiction the whole story was, Barrere was a liar of titanic scale: but the Vonguer myth, Carlyle declared, must be pronounced "Barrere's masterplece: the largest most inspiring piece of blague manufactured for some centuries by any man or nation." At the time the Venguer went down the battle had ceased for some hours; her captain was peacefully getting his tunch in one of the cabins of the Culloden, and some 400 of her crew had been rescued, much to their own satisfaction, by the boats of the various British ships!

WOMAN AND TATTOOING.

Feminine Interest in a Gruesome Maori Collection on Exhibition in London.

Prom the New York Sun.

An exhibition of tattooing on view at the Guildhall Free Museum in London is attracting much attention Strange to say. women are more interested in it than men. The collection consists of examples of ancient Maori tattooing, lent by Major General H. G. Robley. Perhaps their interest is due to the fact that tattooing is a fad among European women at present; or it may be woman's instinctive love of the gruesome that attracts her to such exhibits. An English paper. In speaking of the collection.

"'Mako,' as it was called by the Maoris, was an art practiced by this race from the earliest times, its records being preserved in the embalmed heads of chieftains, departed relatives, or prisoners taken in war, which it was the custom to hand down as heirinown from one separation is appointed. parted relatives, or prisoners taken in war, which it was the custom to hand down as heiriooms from one generation to another. The first embalmed head obtained by Europeans was procured by Banks in 1770. General Robiey, who is the author of a work on 'Mako, or 'Maori Tattooing,' is the possessor of an almost unparalieled collection of these strange relics, including heads of warriors, ladies, and even infants, many of them in perfect condition, though upward of 100 years old. The form of the features is retained, and the marvelously intricate designs of the tattooing are in perfect preservation. The practice of the art of mako was a recognized profession among the Maoris, and was carried out according to given rules, each series of lines having a distinctive name. Sometimes the process was performed by means of indentations in the skin, almost resembling carving, at others it was more coarsely executed. One of the heads of General Robley's collection bears distinct evidence of the touch of two different hands. One cannot but reflect admiringly on the fortitude of those who voluntarily underwent the torture that must have been inflicted. The collection further includes sketches of various fashions in tattooing, and curious specimes of ancient Maori charms implements and ions in tattooing, and curious specimens of ancient Maori charms, implements and efficies carved with make designs."

A little woman who is staying at one of the hotels on her way home to New York from the South has something to say on the subject of going away from home.

"I'm going back to New York." she declares, "and I'm going to stay there right straight along till I die. Summer resorts are mockery and winter resorts are humbugs. Why. when I was in Florida I stayed at the most famous hotel in all the state. The first day at dinner the lea cream was uneatable. At breakfast next morning the cream for the oatmeal was undrinkable. I called the waiter to me. 'Can't you get me some better cream? I asked. He said that was the very best in the house.

"'Well,' I remarked, 'I must say these Florida cows don't understand their business.' From the Washington Post.

"The waiter looked pained at that.
"We don't use Florida cream, madam,' he said, haughtily. Every drop of cream used in this hotel is sent down from New York."

"And I'm going back to New York."
